Seven Human Lives Sacrificed in the Flames.

A NUMBER OF OTHERS INJURED.

Half a Million Dollars' Worth of Property Destroyed By the Burning of The Tribune Building at Minneapolis, Minnesota—Full Details of the Terrible Calamity.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 2.—Seven human lives and $500,000 worth of property was sacrificed Saturday night by a fire that originated in the rooms of the Union League, on the third floor of the Minneapolis Tribune building. The fire was discovered shortly after 10 o'clock by a district messenger, and almost before an alarm could be turned in every door and window of the immense seven-story building was belching fire and smoke. There were upward of eighty men, including the editorial staff and a force of compositors, at work on the seventh floor, and these were penned in like sheep by the sheets of flame that separated them from the elevator and stairway.

Then began a frenzied stampede for the window and roof. Meanwhile the fire department had got a ladder up to the sixth floor, and from there thirty or forty men were taken out of the building and landed on terra firma. Those who were on the roof dared not descend, and several jumped to the roofs of adjoining buildings and escaped with a few bruises.

Dr. Olson, president of the University of Dakota, at Vermillion, was among those on the roof, and seeing all means of escape cut off, he essayed to jump to an adjoining building. He slipped and fell to the ledge of the window on the sixth story, and from there to the ground. He fell head foremost and was instantly killed, every bone in his body being broken.

J. F. Igoo, night operator for the Associated Press, stuck to his post until it was too late to escape. He was frightfully burned about the head, and in his agony he too jumped from the burning building and was killed.

Agent Miles, of the Associated Press, whose home is in Detroit, Mich., attempted to follow Igoo, but fell back into the crater of flame and was burned to a crisp.

Milton A. Pickett, a reporter for The Pioneer-Press, whose office was in The Tribune building, was caught, with a companion named Pierce, on the stairway, and there they were roasted to death and subsequently crushed to a pulp by falling timbers.

While the fire was at its height J. McCutcheon appeared in one of the windows of the composing room and jumped into a net held by the firemen below. The weight of his body carried the net to the stone pavement, and he died in a few moments after being picked up.

A few minutes after he jumped another printer appeared at a window on the opposite side of the rooms. He was told to wait a moment and a ladder would be sent up to him. He appeared crazed by fright, however, and instead of waiting pulled a revolver, and placing the muzzle to his head, fired. The report was heard in the street, and the man was seen to drop to the floor. His name could not be learned.

It was rumored that another man had also shot himself, but this report could not be verified.

There are doubtless several people in the ruins, but just how many will not be known until the debris is removed.

The following is a complete list of the dead and injured so far as can be ascertained:

The dead are: Milton Pickett, assistant city editor of The Pioneer Press.

James F. Igoo, Associated Press operator.

Edward Olsen, president of the University of South Dakota, at Vermillion.

Jerry Jenkinson, a printer.

Robert McCutcheon, a printer.

W. H. Millman, commercial editor of The Tribune.

Walter E. Miles, operator and agent of the Associated Press.

The injured are: William Lawn, a printer; burned on hands and face.

E. C. Andrews, printer; burned hands and face.

George E. Worden, printer; burned hands and face.

Frank Gerber, a deaf mute, printer; hands and face burned.

Adam Weishemire, printer; hurt about hips.

Charles A. Williams, managing editor of The Tribune; badly burned about head and face.

W. H. Williams, foreman composing room; badly burned about face and hands.

S. H. Jones, Pioneer Press reporter; hands and face slightly burned.

Frank Hoover, printer; burned about the neck.

All night long the steamers threw water on the burning and smoking ruins without cessation. The force that was on duty during the night was relieved by another and the good work went on unceasingly. A few spectators stood around during the entire night and as soon as light began to dawn in the east others came, so that as early as 8 o'clock there was a considerable crowd on hand.

As the day advanced and the light became more distinct the completeness of the wreck became more and more evident. The upper floors had given way and their weight, together with the job presses and heavy iron safes had carried all before it, into a confused mass in the basement. Here and there an iron girder remained in position, but so insecurely fixed that it appeared that but a slight jar would be required to send it crashing to the bottom. A few of these girders were bent and twisted out of shape by the heat and the heavy masses that fell upon them from above. It had been hoped that the solidity of the first floor, supported as it was by heavy iron posts and girders would support the overlying mass and thus protect the presses in the basement. But an examination of the ruins proved the probable delusiveness of this hope. Everything had given way before the stupendous weight and the basement was piled full of the heavy debris.

The vaults in the newspaper offices appeared to be in good condition, and unless the heat was too intense the contents will be found to be in a good state of preservation. The walls are cracked but little, and in the opinion of Chief Stetson there is no danger of their falling. The ruins probably drew a much larger crowd Sunday than did the churches. It looked as though everybody had turned out to witness the terrible work of the fire. This was especially the case in the afternoon, when the sidewalks were lined with spectators for some distance from the building, and the overflow found standing room in the middle of the streets. The day was warm enough for spring, and the melted snow, together with the water thrown about by the fire engines, made a mixture about the consistency of mortar on the sidewalks and in the streets.

It was a generally accepted fact that bodies were buried beneath that heterogeneous mass, but how many no one could tell. Chief Stetson and the other members of the fire department appeared to doubt whether all the inmates of the building had escaped. Chief of Police Brackett, who has handled many fires in the past thought there could not be more than two or three bodies buried in the ruins. Careful inquiry failed to show that anxious friends had made inquiries for lost ones. But one report of a missing man could be traced to a reliable source, that came from Burke O'Brien, who said a man who had worked for him had disappeared, and he feared his body would be found in the ruins. The elevator man who was reported missing turned up safe during the day.

Charles A. Smith, the elevator man on the night service, did very creditable work. He was a new man, having only been in the place since the first of the week. After the fire started he made five trips, the last when the shaft was actually on fire, and saved a number of people. Smith says he smelled fire for three-quarters of an hour before he could find its location. After looking on all the floors he finally felt the heat on the third floor, and was about to break in the door of the fatal room when the transom burst and the flames sprang up. He is confident that the fire originated in E. A. Harmon's office, and worked through the partitions before breaking into the hallway, but this seems well high impossible. Smith is certain that more people were burned than have been reported. He says that about five minutes before the fire was discovered he carried a heavy, dark-complexioned lady to the sixth floor. She asked for the editorial rooms of The Pioneer Press. He did not take her back in the elevator, and he is sure she could not have gone down the stairway.

Smith also says that a tall young man with a black mustache shot himself on the seventh floor near the composing room door. Smith was up on his last trip and called to the young man to come into the elevator, but he seemed dazed by the heat and smoke and deliberately drew a revolver and fired into his own head, falling, as Smith supposes, quite dead. Just before he fired the shot he exclaimed: "My God! My wife and —" then the bullet did its work.

The adjoining buildings were saved by the exertions of the firemen, but The Tribune building is a smoldering mass of ruins. The Tribune loses its entire files. Hitchcock, the court stenographer, loses the evidence in all the cases taken for a number of years in the District court.

The Tribune job printing company is among the heaviest sufferers, as it loses a number of valuable presses, its full complement of type and its bindery. In the bindery were destroyed all the court calendars that were to be distributed Tuesday next, which will cause trouble in setting cases for the December term. The loss can be roughly estimated at least at $20,000; insurance, $10,000.

Hart & Brewer and Cross & Carlton lose valuable law libraries. The real estate offices lose nothing but their furniture. Booth, the legal blank man, loses between $10,000 and $15,000, covered by insurance.

Chief Stetson charges that the loss of life is due to the absence of proper fire escapes.

There was some apparently unaccountable delay in turning in the alarm for the fire department on Saturday evening and they arrived on the ground it seemed to be a long time before they got to work. This was a general cause of comment by the spectators.

In an interview Chief Stetson talked as follows on the subject:

"In the first place, there was some unpardonable delay in sending in the alarm. I had no knowledge that there was a fire until it had made such headway that it could not be checked. The man who pulled the alarm box was so excited that he did not do it properly, and sent in a call for police instead of fire. This he did three times, as the records at police headquarters will show. Finally the proper alarm came in and arrived on the ground shortly after. I took in the situation at once, and after sending in a general alarm, gave my attention to rescuing those poor fellows away up in the composing room.

"Of what importance is a building when some twenty human lives are at stake? I gave my personal attention to the manipulation of the ladders and left the supervision of the steamers to my assistants, calling out to the men to do all they could to rescue those on the seventh floor. I ordered the ladder run up. The boys worked with a will. We planted the ladder opposite a window where there were a number of men looking out and began to run it up. The telegraph wires were in the way, and we lost precious time trying to avoid them. Then our ropes got entangled in the wires. When we did finally get the ladder up to its proper place, the heat had driven the printers further over toward the corner of the building, so we had to take it down, move it further down the street and run it up again, encountering the same difficulty as before in the interference of the wires. But we reached the men at last, and saved all who had not yet jumped to the ground.

"Meantime the steamers had begun their work. Unfortunately steamer No. 10 blew out her air chamber and caused a short delay. But we soon got the streams flowing and doing good work. It is a very easy matter to criticize the fire department, and accuse them of negligence of duty and tardiness of action, but I would like to ask the critics what they would do under the same circumstances. In my opinion the department did all that could be done under the circumstances. I charge the loss of life to the owners of the building, who failed to provide proper fire escapes."

Mr. Blethen, proprietor of The Tribune, said that his loss would be about $250,000; insurance $125,000.

The paper was issued as usual yesterday, The St. Paul Globe giving the use of its presses.

The Minneapolis Typographical Union No. 42 met yesterday afternoon in Labor temple to take action on the calamity of Saturday night. A committee on resolutions was appointed, and pending their report, the recording secretary began collecting evidence regarding the repeated efforts of the men to have fire escapes placed on the building, and to place such evidence at the disposition of the coroner.

THE AGONY OVER.

Congressman Reed Selected for the Speaker of the Next House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The floor of the house presented a busy scene Saturday morning as early as 10 o'clock, although noon was the hour fixed for the caucus which was to decide who should preside over the deliberations of the house during the Fifty-first congress.

THOMAS B. REED.

Members assembled in groups to talk over the situation, and the various candidates were earnest in their efforts to add to the strength of their favorite.

The caucus was called to order by Secretary McComas. Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, holds over as chairman of the caucus, but in view of his candidacy for the speakership, he retired and Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, was elected chairman. The first business in order was to call the roll of members.

The roll call developed the presence of 105 members, four less than the entire Republican strength in the house. Mr. Mudd, the contestant for Mr. Compton's seat from the Fifth Maryland district, occupied a seat on the floor, but took no part in the proceedings.

The first business transacted was the adoption of a resolution that the balloting for speakership should be open.

By previous agreement the usual presentation speeches were omitted, and the nomination of a speaker was immediately entered into. The candidates were: Reed, of Maine; McKinley, of Ohio; Cannon, of Illinois; Burrows, of Michigan, and Zerkson, of Iowa. The secretary called the roll and the result was: Reed, 78; McKinley, 39; Cannon, 22; Burrows, 10; Henderson, 16.

A second ballot was at once taken, which resulted as follows: Reed, 85; McKinley, 38; Cannon, 19; Henderson, 14; Burrows, 10.

The announcement of the vote which gave Mr. Reed the Republican nomination for speaker was greeted with applause, and that gentleman returned his thanks in a neat little speech.

At this point in the proceedings an attempt was made to take a recess, but the motion was promptly voted down by the members, who desired to complete the list of officers.

Nominations for the clerkship being in order, Edward McPherson and John M. Carson, both of Pennsylvania, were placed in nomination, and Mr. McPherson was elected, receiving 116 votes to fifty cast for Mr. Carson.

Over the selection of the candidate for sergeant-at-arms there was hardly any contest. Adoniram J. Holmes, an ex-member of congress from Iowa, and A. H. Reed, of Minnesota, were the candidates, and Holmes was elected—142 to 13.

The contest over the next place, the door keeper, was very amicable, however. The candidates were Charles W. Adams, of Maryland, and James A. Wheat, of Wisconsin. The vote was very close, and the news received outside indicated the selection first of one, and then of the other candidate. A recount of the roll call was necessary, and when it had been made the result showed that Adams had defeated his opponent by a bare majority; the vote standing 83 to 82.

Mr. Wheat was, however, immediately nominated for the office of postmaster, receiving 99 votes, against 38 for Leifell, 20 for Womell, and 15 for McKee.

Rev. Charles B. Ransdell, of the North Presbyterian church, of Washington, was nominated for chaplain, receiving 84 votes out of a total of 147, the remainder being divided among half a dozen other candidates.

The caucus then, at 5:15 o'clock, adjourned.

Fast Time South.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 2.—The Queen and Crescent railroad has greatly reduced the time to travelers between Cincinnati and Florida by putting on a "Florida Limited," which leaves this city at 8 a. m., and from Chattanooga, on the Western and Atlantic, reaching Atlanta at 10:32 p. m. (fourteen hours and a half) and arriving at Jacksonville, Fla., at 11:30 a. m., or twenty-seven hours and twenty minutes from Cincinnati.

The Deposed Emperor.

Dom Pedro Arrives Safely at Cape DeVerd Islands.

REFUSES TO BE INTERVIEWED.

He Telegraphs His Thanks to the King of Portugal for His Kindness in Setting Apart the Nasidades Palace for His Use, But Declines to Accept It—He Will Continue His Journey to Nice—Other Foreign News.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Portuguese steamer Alagoas, with ex-Emperor Dom Pedro and his party on board, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape De Verd islands, Saturday. All the members of the party are well. Upon the arrival of the Alagoas an attempt was made to interview Dom Pedro concerning the events that had led to his deposition and exile. He declined, however, to enter into any discussion relative to the revolution, but stated that he had been treated with the utmost kindness throughout. The Alagoas will proceed for Lisbon.

When the steamer arrived at St. Vincent she was flying the new flag of the United States of Brazil. The flag remained flying until the Brazil consul boarded her and informed the captain that the provisional government had given instructions that the old flag was to be hoisted at St. Vincent and Lisbon. The officers of the steamer, not having direct orders from Rio Janeiro, declined to make the change. They, however, immediately sent a cable dispatch to Rio Janeiro, asking for orders relative to the flag, pending the arrival of which the Alagoas flies no flag at all.

The Alagoas was conveyed four and one-half days from Rio Janeiro by a Brazilian man-of-war. The war ship was much slower than the Alagoas, and the latter's passage was consequently much longer than it would otherwise have been. Fine weather was experienced all the way from Rio Janeiro to St. Vincent.

Upon the arrival of Dom Pedro at St. Vincent, he telegraphed to the King of Portugal, gratefully thanking the latter for his kindness in setting apart the Nasidades palace for his use, but declining to avail himself of the offer. He would go to his former quarters at the Hotel Braganza, and after a few days rest would go thence to Nice.

There are great preparations going on in Lisbon, both military and civic, for the reception of Dom Pedro, of Brazil. Both royalists and Republicans are as one in their desire to pay a personal tribute to the deposed ruler of Brazil, who is beloved by all. But though no friction is likely to occur between the political factions on that occasion, it is pretty generally conceded that the Republicans will at some not distant day cause a test to be made of their strength.

A Triple Collision at Sea.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The steamer Iowa, bound from Liverpool for Boston, with passengers and cargo, collided in the Mersey Saturday night with the steamer Ligurian, from Alexandria for Liverpool, with cotton, and also with the Spanish steamer Murin. The Ligurian was badly damaged and her crew abandoned her, believing her to be in a sinking condition. The cotton kept her afloat, however, and she was finally beached. The Iowa and the Murin were also considerably damaged, and both have been put on the docks for repairs.

Another Letter From Stanley.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Herald's Zanzibar special says: Stanley, writing from Wikessi, Nov. 26, states that all of the party were well and enjoying Capt. Wissmann's luxuries. He complains that his mail has been lost or stolen. In a postscript dated the 27th he announces that he has received the English consul's letters, and expects to arrive at Bagamoyo on Wednesday, Dec. 4, and at Zanzibar Thursday.

ROME, Dec. 2.—The Reforma publishes a letter from Capt. Casali, Emin's recent companion, dated Tunguru, March 28, 1888, describing his arrest in January by order of King Kabrega. He was cruelly bound, and driven from village to village toward the country of Chief Nakora, who had orders to kill him. After eight days' suffering and fasting he was rescued by Emin, but he lost all his effects.

A FATHER'S CRIME.

He Kills His Son, Burns His Body, and Attempts Suicide.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—A Tribune special from Cellina, O., says: About a mile south of here Saturday several men found John Tugar lying by the remains of a blazing fire and shot through the body. When questioned about a boy seen with him the night before, Tugar replied that he was in the fire, pointing out where parts of the boy were still roasting in the log heap. The men dragged the ashes and found buttons, buckles, bones and pieces of roasted flesh, all that remained of a 15-year-old lad.

Tugar, whose bullet wound will not prove fatal, stated at the inquest held over the boy's remains that he was his son, John. They had been tramping, and Friday night he drove the lad out to beg. The little fellow returned late without anything. This incensed Tugar, who set the boy at work gathering a large quantity of wood, with which an immense bonfire was built. Late at night they quarreled, and he struck the boy, crushing his skull. Alarmed at what he had done, and thinking to destroy the evidence of his crime he flung the body in the blazing fire and spent the balance of the time until daylight poking the body with sticks to destroy it fully. With the morning, alarmed at discovery, he turned his pistol, which contained but one load, against his breast and fired.

HOPPER-CALDWELL NUPTIALS.

The Bulletin's Desha Valley Representative Tells of Interesting Social Events.

Caldwell Place on the head-waters of the bonny Shannon had not shown to such advantage for twenty years (that festive event will be remembered by some of the old boys and girls) as it did on Tuesday, Nov. 26th. The old homestead put on its youthful harness again, and was all aglow with blazing fires and bright lights, and overflowing with the spirit of gracious, genial hospitality. The toilets of the ladies were elegant and the guests were among the most prominent of Fleming, Bourbon and Mason people. The occasion was a 5 o'clock dinner given by the young hostess, Miss Mamie Caldwell, in honor of her bridemaids and other intimate social friends, on the eve of her matrimonial alliance with Mr. Rich Hopper. Misses Robb, Browning and Hyatt assisted the bride-elect in receiving. Over forty guests were present, among those a bevy of Blue Grass girls, clear-eyed and soft of voice, more than equal to the poet's dream; also patriarchs and young beaux, roses and married belles, that made a party perfect.

The dining-room was a scene of beauty. Covers were laid for forty-two. The illuminations were wax candles in candelabra. The cuisine was perfect, the menu, embracing all the luxuries, native and foreign, was served in courses and in style. Miss Rebecca Caldwell presided over the coffee urn and Mrs. W. T. Spears served the chocolate and oysters, Mr. John L. Caldwell host. The young people were in the happy majority and took possession of the floor, while those who had enjoyed the gayeties in years gone by looked on with approving pleasure. Music was furnished by Mr. Robert Caldwell and Mrs. Jake Worthington in a medley of piano waltz recitals, and the bocaccio and fatinza were indulged in by those who felt inclined to "trip the light fantastic."

At eight o'clock the bride's cake was cut, which concealed some coveted treasures. After an animated contest, the boys and girls cutting alternately, the prize-winners were: Burgess Taylor, gold ring; Sallie Jones, silver tumbler; Eli Pogue, dime. The initiated can explain the mysterious significance of these enticings. At 10 o'clock reluctant farewells were spoken, the parlors and banquet hall were deserted, carriages were in waiting, lanterns lighted, pleasant dreams were wished to bride and groom-elect, and homeward bound was the order; low voices as the night grew old took on softer tones and over all the stars shone down in benison, and the moon sailed out to the West.

A CHURCH WEDDING - MAYSICK - HOPPER-CALDWELL.
Miss Mary Bell Caldwell, a Mason society favorite and niece of Mr. John L. Caldwell and Mr. Rich P. Hopper, a popular and prosperous young Maysick merchant, were married in the Presbyterian Church at 1 o'clock Wednesday, Nov. 27th. This was pronounced a white wedding, bride and bridemaids and church all dressed in white. The bride's pure and snowy silk and vapory tulle were in beautiful harmony with the immaculate costumes of her maids. The pulpit, chancel and altar were artistically draped in white (the decorations in white chrysanthemums and the graceful snailax) giving the appearance of marble sculpture, the work of the deft fingers of Mrs. W. J. Spears and Miss Phoebe Forman. The costuming was especially fine, the marriage service by Rev. Spears was an innovation of the time-honored custom and was exceedingly pointed and impressive.

The bride is a very pretty, vivacious and stylish demi-blonde, and was arrayed in a robe of white fallie silk, gauze drapings de-collette, moire front, diamond ear-rings, white tulle veil, caught with orange blossoms; court-train. She carried a wreath of white roses and looked as fresh as the moon and as bright as a sunbeam.

The bridemaids, Miss Mary Robb, a slender, graceful, exquisitely-formed girl of the demi-blonde type, and Miss Em Lee Browning, a dark, rich beauty of the dazzling brunette order, wore costumes in duplicate white surah silk V-neck, gauze over-dress. They carried wreaths of M-rechal Nell buds and snailax. The groomsmen, James McCreary, of Flemingsburg, and Thomas P. Hopper, of Maysick, appeared in full evening dress, white gloves and ties.

The ushers, Seymour Mysl, Eli Pogue, Will Gooding and John Clark were similarly attired and acquitted themselves with much grace and dignity.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hopper were generously remembered by thoughtful friends in Cincinnati, Maysville, Flemingsburg and Maysick and the varied line of bridal presents ranged from the utilitarian to the ornamental.

Professor Frost manipulated the ivory and filled the church with witching melodies, playing the "Marriage Bell Mazurka," an original composition, as a voluntary. Mendelssohn's wedding march, preceding and after the ceremony, and "O Never Say My Love Can Change" as an adieu to the bride.

Following the exit of the bridal party was a delightfully informal reception at the residence of Mrs. Sue Hopper, mother of the groom. The party were royally entertained with an elegant luncheon, Mr. Charlie Hopper, of Maysville, playing the host. Miss Jennie Evans and Mrs. A. D. Evans, of Flemingsburg, were among the guests. A cute little slipper filled with rice was scattered at the departing bride, (who wore a traveling costume a jaunty plum-colored broad cloth, with hat and gloves en suite) as an expression of good luck to her and the gallant men upon whom her future happiness would so much depend. The bridal tour will take in several Southern cities, where the honeymoon of repose, exempt from all claims of society, will be mutually delectated.

THE NEWELL KILLING.

Further Particulars of the Shooting as Developed at the Examining Trial.

The examining trial of John Thomas for shooting and killing Henry L. Newell, Jr. last Friday night was commenced this morning at 10 o'clock before Judge Coons, at the court house. The Commonwealth was represented by Messrs. Phister and Wall & E. L. Worthington, while Messrs. Whitaker & Robertson and John L. Whitaker appeared for defendant. Mr. Bruce Metcalfe was the first witness. In substance he said: I was at the Central Hotel Friday night, with Robt. Caldwell. We were in the barroom. John Thomas was standing at the end of the counter. Ferd Hechinger and Henry Newell came in and Ferd ordered the beer. Thomas refused to let Newell have any. Newell says "I will go behind the counter and get it. Thomas replied: "You're a good man." Newell then made some insulting remark, but I didn't hear what it was. Thomas pulled his pistol and fired three or four shots over Newell's head. I went out the back door. Heard other shots, but can't say how many. Afterwards saw Newell in hall at ladies' entrance, lying on his elbow breathing hard. When first shots were fired it looked like Newell had hold of Thomas' pistol. I never saw him have any weapons.

Robert Caldwell next testified. He was in the barroom when Newell and Hechinger came in. Didn't pay much attention to them until Thomas refused to let Newell have the beer. Hechinger declined to drink unless Newell was given beer also. Newell said if he wanted it he would go behind the counter and get it. Thomas replied: "You're large enough and there's the beer. You'd better come and get it," or something to that effect. He was cool and collected and neither were talking very loud. Newell made some remark but didn't hear just what it was. Thomas said: "I won't take such talk as that from any s—n of a b—h." I saw him reach in the drawer hastily and get a pistol. I apprehended trouble and went out back door. Three shots were fired before I got out, but I didn't turn around. Heard a shot after I got out. The first three were fired in quick succession. I remained in the billiard room until things had quieted down. Hiram Daugherty, night clerk at the Central Hotel, was on duty Friday night. Newell and Ferd. Hechinger came in about 10:45 o'clock. They passed into the barroom, quietly. The next thing I heard was the pistol shots—three or four. Didn't hear any loud words. I started to the ladies' hall to call Mr. Collier. Heard other shots. As I was coming out of the hall, Newell came in and fell. As I reached the door, Thomas was in the office and said: "Where is he." I replied: "He's here, but don't shoot this way." When Newell came in the hotel he seemed to be under the influence of liquor.

Frank Brady, colored, a bell-boy at the hotel, was on duty Friday night. Saw Newell and Hechinger come in and go into the bar. I was in the office when the shooting was done. Heard three or four shots. Heard no words or cuffing. The next time I saw Newell he came out in the hall leading to the billiard room. He turned around twice. He said: "That's all right." Thomas came out and said: "I won't allow anyone to talk that way about my wife." Newell came on then out in through the office, and went in the hall at ladies' entrance where he fell on his face. I called Mr. Collier and afterwards went for Dr. Phillips.

The examination was still in progress when the BULLETIN went to press. The substance of the rest of the testimony will be given in to-morrow's issue.

Last Notice.

Next Thursday, December 5th, will be the last day to pay your city taxes. R. A. COCHRAN, JR., Collector and Treasurer. n30d4t

A SPECIAL from Flemingsburg says: "The County Court last summer took away all the property of Robert Couser, eighty-three, and very rich, and appointed a trustee, who sold all his personalty. Couser, it was alleged, had squandered $75,000 on a female acquaintance in two years in a perfectly virtuous way. Friday evening the Circuit Court decided that the whole proceeding was illegal and void from the beginning, and the County Judge is liable on his official bond for all damages resulting."

MESSEURS. SIMONDS & DUKE, formerly of this city, are winning a reputation as "princes of caterers" at Bloomington, Ill., where they have charge of the Windsor Hotel. A K. of P. banquet last week was served by these gentlemen and the menu shows that it was a "feast fit for Kings." Speaking of their Thanksgiving dinner, the Bloomington Bulletin says: "It was undoubtedly the finest dinner ever served in a Bloomington hostelry. These gentlemen will certainly make Windsor Hotel more flourishing than it has ever been in the history of the house."

Forecast of Congress.

Business That Will Occupy the Present Session.

QUESTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED.

The Principal Topics to Come Before This Congress are the Tariff, the Silver Question, Federal Control of National Elections and a Proposition to Repeal the Civil Service Law.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The congress, which assembles at noon to-day, meets under very peculiar conditions. A Republican senate and a Republican house will meet to transact business, which will be submitted to a Republican president for approval. It would seem that where such perfect political harmony exists, harmony of ideas and interests should be found also. But whether this harmony will be present at the deliberations of the two houses of congress or not remains to be seen. There are many questions to be considered by this congress which cannot be settled on party lines.

The principal topics to come before this congress for discussion are the tariff, the silver question, Federal control of National elections, a proposition to repeal the civil service law and the appropriation of money for rivers and harbors and other local objects and enterprises. The tariff question was the chief issue in the last congress. It will divide interest this term with the silver question. The question of silver coinage has been much agitated of late months and the secretary of the treasury, it is confidently expected, will make such recommendations to congress in the annual report that will be transmitted to the house and senate on Wednesday next as will bring the question into still greater prominence.

The effect of the deliberations of the silver convention recently held in St. Louis will undoubtedly be felt, and the course taken by Mr. Reed, the speaker, in constituting the committee on coinage, weights and measures will be watched with much interest. Mr. Lee, the director of the mint, has expressed the belief that congress will increase the coinage of silver. The only doubt that exists is whether the extremists in both houses of congress will not prevent legislation by refusing to accede to any proposition for moderate legislation. Among the ideas which will be laid before the coming session of congress is the proposition to increase the coinage to $4,000,000 a month, a proposition for the free coinage of silver and a proposition to authorize the issue of paper money based on silver bullion held on deposit by the government. That there will be some modification of the present laws governing the coinage of silver there is little doubt as the press of the east as well as of the west, and bankers and financiers in both sections are agitating the question now.

Two co-relative questions which agitated the last congress will come up before the Fifty-first congress for a great deal of discussion. An effort will be made to amend the tariff laws, and a strong influence will be brought to bear to have the internal revenue laws repealed. It is generally understood that the Republican majority in house and senate will make an effort to have a bill on the line of the Allison tariff bill of last year put through both houses and sent to the president. The discussion of this question may be postponed for several months. It is bound to absorb a great deal of the attention of both houses. Mr. Mill, of Texas, has been quoted recently as saying that the Democrats in the house would possibly filibuster to prevent the passage of any tariff bill at this session, but the Republican majority has little fear of this.

Senator Farwell, of Illinois, will introduce a bill to abolish the civil service examinations. He has discussed the matter with the president and had told the president what he proposes to do. He denounces the law as a menace to good government. Representative Candler, of Georgia, will also introduce a bill to repeal the civil service law. Representative Hitt, of Illinois, in a recent interview, expressed the opinion that the civil service law would be amended but not repealed and this seems to be the view of a great many of the older members of the house. Mr. Hitt also believes that the inter-state commerce law will be amended.

The questions of the relations between the United States and Canada and of the effect of competition of the Canadian Pacific railroad and its connections with the railroads of the country, will come up for discussion in the senate under reports to be presented by special committees which have been investigating the subjects during the past summer. The committee on Pacific railways, which has been to the Pacific coast this summer, will make some recommendations to the senate as to the forfeiture of the lands granted to the Pacific railroads. The general impression is that legislation on this subject will affect only those lands which remain unearned at the present day.

There is little doubt that a river and harbor bill will be passed by this congress. The local demands for it are of such a character that they cannot be ignored, particularly as congress at its last session made no appropriation for the improvement of river and harbors. The subject of coast defenses will be debated in house and senate with what result it would be hard to determine now.

A number of amendments have been prepared to be offered to the existing contract labor laws. Some applications have been made to the secretary of the treasury for the admission of skilled laborers to establish industries of which American workmen have no knowledge. It is desired that the enforcement of the law in these cases works unnecessary hardships. To prevent this congress will be asked to amend the law. Some minor amendments will also be necessary to make some of its provisions effective.

Congress will be asked at an early day to provide a form of government for Oklahoma. A bill for this purpose is now being prepared under the supervision of the secretary of the interior.

The National pension committee of the Grand Army of the Republic has formulated a number of pension bills, which will be offered for consideration. Principal among these is the per diem allowance pension bill and the total disability pension bill. The usual amount of private legislation will be offered for consideration. One of the early questions to be considered by congress is the location of the world's fair of 1892. The claims of New York, Washington, St. Louis, and Chicago will be warmly pressed from the beginning of the session, and the question will likely not be disposed of until January or February.

As a result of the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the question of the preservation of American forests will be brought strongly before congress. The question of the further development by irrigation of the arid lands of the west will also be considered.

Among the general subjects which will come up for consideration are the following: The abolition or regulation of trusts; the establishment of postal savings banks; the organization of post-offices aboard trans-Atlantic steamships; an increase of the number of judicial circuits so as to relieve the pressure of unfinished business in the supreme court; the abolition of lotteries so far as congress can accomplish that object; the payment of Indian depredation claims of western pioneers and the organization of a special tribunal to adjudicate those claims; the granting of subsidies to the American merchant marine, the Blair educational bill, an investigation of the affairs of the pension office and the civil service commission; the settlement of the dispute over the seal fisheries, total exclusion of Chinese and other objectionable immigrants and possibly a proposition to settle the race question in the south by limiting the representation in congress to a proportion warranted by the white population of the different states alone.

The house will have to take under almost immediate consideration the rules which are to govern its deliberations. An effort will be made to curb the power which the rules of the last house gave to the minority, but this will meet with vigorous opposition from the Democrats, and a general impression seems to prevail that the rules will differ in no material way from those of the last house. The house has also to consider seventeen contested election cases.

A caucus of Republican senators will be held in the near future to consider a proposed change in the officers of the senate.
